Stockton is an Equal Opportunity Institution

In partnership with the New Jersey Office of Homeland Security and Preparedness
Welcome to Building Resilience in the New Threat Paradigm: Targeted Violence Against People of Faith. This summit is intended to train representatives of houses of worship, from multiple religious denominations across Europe, the United States and elsewhere, on common security concerns and best security practices.

The Miller Center for Community Protection and Resilience at Rutgers University has been in the forefront of confronting campaigns of hatred all over the world and working with local communities to develop the tools and resources necessary to confront extremist violence. The establishment of the Miller Center is a direct outgrowth of Rutgers’ work on the Faith-Based Communities Security Program, supported by the Miller Family and launched in May 2014 in the wake of a lethal terrorist attack on the Jewish Museum in Brussels. Since then, Rutgers and its partners have implemented programs and projects that protect vulnerable populations by identifying and disseminating best practices, offering police-community training workshops, consulting with and assisting vulnerable populations on security and civil liberties issues, and engaging in research relevant to the protection of vulnerable populations.

Stockton University is an early pioneer in the field of Holocaust and Genocide Studies. It opened its Holocaust Resource Center in 1990, and, nine years later, launched the nation’s first Master of Arts program in Holocaust and Genocide Studies. In 2015, the program added a more targeted Genocide Prevention Certificate designed to meet the need for specialized training among professionals in government, the business sector, and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) around the world. Today, thousands of undergraduate and graduate students enroll in these courses, and a growing dual credit partnership with area high schools enhances these programs’ impact further still.

This summit is the first of many programs resulting from a new strategic partnership between the Miller Center and Stockton University’s programs in human security, Holocaust Studies, and genocide prevention. Recognizing our shared vision for promoting safe communities, our institutions have agreed to pursue complementary projects promoting work on issues relating to human security, including the development of solutions for mass violence and issues facing vulnerable communities, and the fostering of programming in genocide prevention. We hope you find these sessions and exercises informative and productive, and that you continue to engage with us as we develop new programs to assist in enhancing the safety and security of our communities.

Sincerely,

John J. Farmer, Jr.

Summit Overview

Faith-based communities in Europe, the United States, and around the world have become targets of extremist hatred, bigotry, and violence. Massacres of Jews in Pittsburgh, African-American Christians in Charleston, Muslims in New Zealand, and members of faiths elsewhere have underscored the security challenges faced by faith-based institutions. These challenges force them to balance their essential mission to be open and welcoming to the communities they serve, while also providing a safe sacred space where their worshippers can come for refuge, prayer, and fellowship.

Prompted by these escalating security concerns, the Rutgers University Miller Center for Community Protection and Resilience, the Rutgers University Center for Critical Intelligence Studies, and Stockton University are hosting this international summit to address how organizations can plan to prevent, protect against, mitigate the impact of, and recover from instances of harassment, hatred, and violence.

Summit Objectives

This summit’s overarching goal is to connect theoretical research with real-world experience to devise practical and achievable approaches to the problem of extremist violence. More specifically, we seek to:

- Establish an Interfaith Resilience Coalition (IRC) of faith-based institutions and other stakeholders for ongoing information sharing and best-practice exchanges within and among communities;
- Establish a unified approach and common standard for creating safer, more secure faith-based communities;
- Develop and strengthen relationships with law enforcement officials;
- Clarify the needs of faith communities in developing relationships with federal and state law enforcement; and
- Publish, in conjunction with the Summit, an ongoing practical online guide to identifying and deploying best practices.
JOHN FARMER, ESQ.

Executive Director, Rutgers University Miller Center for Community Protection and Resilience and Rutgers University Professor

John Farmer is currently University Professor of Law at Rutgers University and has served in this capacity since July 2014. He also served as special counsel to the President of Rutgers University from 2014-2017. His legal career prior to his current position has spanned service in high-profile government appointments, private practice in diverse areas of criminal law, and teaching and law school administration. After graduating from Georgetown University (BA 1979) and Georgetown University Law Center (JD 1986), Farmer began his career as a law clerk to Associate Justice Alan B. Handler of the New Jersey Supreme Court. He worked as an associate at Riker, Danzig, Scherer, Hyland & Perretti LLP before joining the Office of the U.S. Attorney in Newark, where he received the U.S. Attorney General's Special Achievement Award for Sustained Superior Performance in 1993. Farmer joined the administration of New Jersey Governor Christine Todd Whitman in 1994, serving as assistant counsel, deputy chief counsel, and then chief counsel. From 1999-2002 he was New Jersey's Attorney General. From 2003-2004, as senior counsel and team leader for the 9/11 Commission, Farmer led the investigation of the country's preparedness for and response to the terrorist attacks and was a principal author of the Commission's final report. His book, The Ground Truth: The Story Behind America's Defense on 9/11, was named a New York Times notable book. Farmer was a partner at K&L Gates and in 2007 became a founding partner of the law firm Arseneault, Whipple, Farmer, Fassett and Azzarello, LLP. In addition to his law practice, in 2008 he served as senior advisor to General James Jones, Special Envoy for Middle East Regional Security, on development of the rule of law in the Palestinian Authority territory and was invited by the U.S. Embassy in Armenia to assist that nation's legislative commission in investigating widespread violence and unrest following its elections. He was recruited to become Dean of Rutgers School of Law–Newark in 2009, and served in that capacity until April 2013, when he was asked to complete his Deanship contract by serving as Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Rutgers University. He was named General Counsel of the Year for 2013 by the New Jersey Business and Industry Association. In 2011 he served as counsel to the commission that redrew New Jersey's legislative districts and, later that year, was appointed the independent, tie-breaking member of the commission charged with developing a new map of New Jersey's Congressional districts. Farmer is responsible for establishing the Rutgers Center for Critical Intelligence Studies (which has been named an Intelligence Community Center for Academic Excellence through the Office of the Director of National Intelligence) and the Miller Center for Community Protection and Resilience, where he serves as executive director. He served as the principal investigator on a $1.95 million-dollar grant to develop programs that prepare students to work in intelligence and national security positions. Farmer served as a member of the Advisory Committee on Judicial Conduct from 2007-2014, and as the Compliance Monitor, from 2008-2014, of a National Security Agreement entered into with the federal government by Alcatel and Lucent Technologies upon their merger. In 2012, he received the Justice William J. Brennan, Jr. Award from the Association of the Federal Bar of New Jersey and the Distinguished Public Service Award from Leadership New Jersey. In 2014, he received the Thurgood Marshall Award from the Thurgood Marshall College Fund. In 2015, he received the Lifetime Achievement Award from the New Jersey Law Journal.
MICHELLE CRAIG MCDONALD
Chief Officer for Academic Programming, Atlantic City and Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs

Michelle Craig McDonald is the Chief Officer for Academic Programming, Atlantic City and Associate Vice President of Academic Affairs at Stockton University. In this capacity, she coordinates Stockton’s off-campus instructional sites, including the university’s new Atlantic City Academic Center, to ensure their smooth integration with main campus. In addition, she oversees the Offices of Research and Sponsored Programs, Office of Continuing Studies, Center for Community Engagement, and Office of Global Engagement, and is the University’s Accreditation Liaison Officer to Middle States Commission on Higher Education and other national, regional, state and local agencies in higher education. Dr. McDonald is also Associate Professor of History in the School of Arts and Humanities, and her research and scholarship has been supported by grants from the Fulbright Foundation, National Endowment for the Humanities, and the U.S. Department of Education. Dr. McDonald received her Ph.D. in History from the University of Michigan, an M.A. in Museum and American Studies from George Washington University, an M.A. in Liberal Arts from St. John’s College, and a B.A. in History from the University of California (Los Angeles). She was also the Harvard-Newcomen Post-Doctoral Fellow in Business History at the Harvard Business School in 2005, the year before she came to Stockton University.
PAUL MILLER, ESQ.
Founder and Advisory Board Member of Rutgers University's Miller Center for Community Protection and Resilience

Paul S. Miller received his AB Degree from Rutgers University in 1960 and LLB, with high honors, from Rutgers School of Law, in 1962. He was executive vice president and general counsel of Pfizer Inc., as well as a member of the Senior Management Committee. He spent more than 30 years with Pfizer before retiring in 2002. Prior to that, he began his legal career at Kaye Scholer, and was in private practice before joining Pfizer. Mr. Miller was a member of the Board of Directors of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce as well as former Chairman of that organization's National Chamber Litigation Council. He also served on the Board of the Citizen's Crime Commission of New York City, having retired as Chairman of the Board in 2002. Mr. Miller was included by the National Law Journal in the list of “100 Most Influential Lawyers in America” and in “Who's Who in American Law.” He received the 1999 Shaare Zedek Medical Center “Jerusalem Humanitarian Award” and the 2001 Jewish Theological Seminary “Louis Marshall Award.” Mr. Miller has received awards from AIPAC; Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey; and Touro Law School. He is a former member of the Board of Directors of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC); former member of the Board of Overseers of the Civil Justice and Middle East Institutes at Rand; former member of the Board of Overseers of Tel Aviv University and the Albert Einstein College of Medicine; and former President of the American Jewish Congress. He also served as Chairman of AIPAC’s Executive Committee, Chairman of the Northeast Region of AIPAC and served as Co-Chair of AIPAC’s 2001 Policy Conference. He also served on the Board of Trustees of the Jewish Theological Seminary and the Advisory Board of Corinthian Capital and the Board of Overseers of Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey. He is admitted to practice in the State of New York, and served for years following his retirement from Pfizer as special counsel at Kaye Scholer.

LEE LEVINE, ESQ.
Senior Partner at Levine Staller Attorneys at Law

Lee Levine is a senior partner at Levine Staller Attorneys at Law and has been practicing law in southern New Jersey for over 55 years. He currently focuses his practice on representing clients in connection with commercial transactions, as well as representing and advising fiduciaries in the administration of estates and trusts. He was educated at the University of Pennsylvania (B.A.), Dickinson School of Law (L.L.B.), and New York University (L.L.M).
JARED M. MAPLES
Director, New Jersey Office of Homeland Security and Preparedness

Jared Maples was named Director of the New Jersey Office of Homeland Security and Preparedness (NJOHSP) on June 5, 2017. In his role, he serves as the federally designated Homeland Security Advisor (HSA) to the Governor and is the Cabinet-level executive responsible for coordinating and leading New Jersey’s Counterterrorism, Cybersecurity, and Emergency Preparedness efforts. Director Maples joined NJOHSP in January 2016 as Director of the Division of Administration. The Division of Administration encompasses all information technology and security, human resources, facilities management, and financial activities for the Office, including oversight of millions of dollars in federal homeland security grant funding. Prior to joining NJOHSP, Director Maples spent over a decade at the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in a variety of leadership roles and previously worked at the US Department of Defense in the Office of the Secretary of Defense. As a seasoned intelligence officer, his career focused on executive strategy development and execution, organizational and operational change management, emergency operations response, internal security investigations and personnel protection in high threat environments. Director Maples was fortunate to travel around the world on behalf of the US Government, including many deployments to areas of active hostilities. In 2014, Director Maples was appointed to the Board of Trustees for the Government Employee Voluntary Investment Fund. As a Trustee, Director Maples and the rest of the Board maintain exclusive responsibility for the investment of nearly $300 million in assets across Growth, Aggressive, Index, and Income funds. Director Maples serves as Chair of the N.J. Domestic Security Preparedness Task Force (DSPTF) and is an Executive Member of the NJ Joint Terrorism Task Force (JITF), Philadelphia Joint Terrorism Task Force (JITF), the Port of NY/NJ Area Maritime Security Committee (AMSC), and the Oyster Creek Safety Advisory Panel. Additionally, Director Maples is Co-Chair of the Statewide Public Safety Communications Commission and serves on the National Governors Homeland Security Advisors Council (GHSAC). Director Maples holds an MBA from Georgetown University, a Bachelor’s degree from Villanova University, and an Associate’s degree from Valley Forge Military College.

COLONEL PATRICK CALLAHAN
Superintendent, New Jersey State Police

On Tuesday, October 31, 2017, Colonel Patrick J. Callahan was sworn in by Governor Chris Christie as the 14th Colonel of the New Jersey State Police. Colonel Callahan enlisted in the State Police as a member of the 115th Class in April 1995. He served as Recovery Bureau Chief in the aftermath of Superstorm Sandy and worked with state and federal partners to develop and implement long-term recovery effort strategies. Colonel Callahan also served as the Commanding Officer of the Emergency Management Section and Assistant State Director of the Office of Emergency Management. He was chairman of the Command and Control Subcommittee of the Emergency Management Section when New Jersey hosted Super Bowl XLVIII, working to develop and implement all operations undertaken by the Public Safety Compound. Colonel Callahan also served as the Deputy Superintendent of Operations, supervising and directing the operational activities of the 1,800 enlisted members assigned to Field Operations as well as the operational duties and responsibilities of the Traffic and Public Safety Office, Victims Services Unit, Fatal Accident Investigation Unit, Highway Traffic Safety Unit, and the Criminal Investigations Offices within Field Operations. Colonel Callahan earned his B.A. from Villanova University and a Master of Administrative Science from Fairleigh Dickinson University.

JOHN H. HILL
Assistant Secretary, U.S. Department of Homeland Security

Appointed on April 2, 2018, Assistant Secretary Hill is responsible for the Office of Partnership and Engagement (OPE). OPE serves as the Office of the Secretary's outreach to state, local, tribal and territorial governments, state and local law enforcement, private sector and academic engagement. Indiana Governor Mike Pence appointed Hill as his deputy chief of staff for public safety on July 10, 2014, where he oversaw all of the state’s public safety agencies. He also chaired the Indiana Criminal Justice Institute Board of Trustees, Governor's Task Force on Drug Enforcement, Treatment and Prevention, and the Indiana Executive Council on Cybersecurity. Previously, he was the Executive Director of the Indiana Department of Homeland Security, which began on January 14, 2013. There he was responsible for the state’s emergency management and homeland security efforts, including planning, training, emergency response and recovery, fire and building safety, and grants administration. He also served as the director of the Counter Terrorism and Security Council, which is chaired by Indiana's Lieutenant Governor. He formed The Hill Group, Inc. in 2009 and worked as a consultant on highway safety matters until 2013. In 2003, President Bush appointed Hill to serve as the Chief Safety Officer at the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA), and he was unanimously confirmed by the United States Senate to be FMCSA’s Administrator in 2006. In this role, he was responsible for improving the nation's commercial vehicle highway safety by finalizing several key safety regulations, improving performance of commercial motor carriers in cooperation with the state enforcement agencies and providing careful coordination with the United States Congress on a variety of critical initiatives. Also at the federal level, Mr. Hill was involved in national preparedness and response to terrorism, pandemic influenza and natural disasters. He served as the U.S. Department of Transportation Secretary’s personal representative for transportation matters in Mississippi and Louisiana following Hurricane Katrina. Mr. Hill has more than 40 years in public service at the federal and state levels. He was a member of the Indiana State Police for 29 years, working in both public safety and highway safety. He also served as the Field Enforcement Division Commander and was later asked to create the State Police's new Motor Carrier Division. Mr. Hill is a graduate of Taylor University where he obtained a B.A. in political science. He also graduated from the Indiana State Police Academy.
Russell C. Deyo began serving as Acting Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security (DHS) on November 1, 2016. He was the second-in-command of the Department with a $60 billion budget and a workforce of 240,000 individuals throughout the world. Prior to becoming the Acting Deputy Secretary, Deyo served as Under Secretary for Management at DHS since May 11, 2015. In this role, Deyo oversaw all aspects of the Department’s management programs, including human resources, funding, and other administrative lines of business. Mr. Deyo has over 30 years of management experience in both the government and private sector. Prior to joining DHS, Mr. Deyo retired from Johnson & Johnson in 2012 after 27 years of service, where he held a number of positions, including Vice President of Administration and General Counsel. For 16 years, he also served as a member of the Johnson & Johnson Executive Committee, the company’s principal management group for global operations. Prior to Johnson & Johnson, Mr. Deyo was an Assistant U.S. Attorney for the District of New Jersey from 1978 to 1985, serving the last three years as Chief of Special Prosecutions, receiving commendations for outstanding service from the Attorney General and the Commissioner of Customs. From 1977 to 1978, Mr. Deyo was an attorney at Patterson, Belknap, Webb & Tyler in New York City. Mr. Deyo is a cum laude graduate of Dartmouth College and holds a J.D. from Georgetown University Law Center, where he was Executive Editor of the Law Center’s International Law Journal. Mr. Deyo presently serves on the Advisory Board of The Miller Center and on the Board of Directors of the National Center of State Courts and One Mind.

Rabbi Francine Roston is a co-founder and rabbi of the Glacier Jewish Community/B’nai Shalom which serves the Jewish community of the Flathead Valley in northwest Montana. She is also co-founder and leader of a local Interfaith Clergy group, a member of the local human rights group Love Lives Here, and a regular volunteer for Habitat for Humanity of the Flathead Valley and Farm Hands/Nourish the Flathead—providing local, nutritious food to school backpack programs and coordinating the double-SNAP program at local farmers’ markets. Rabbi Roston has also served multiple positions in New Jersey. From 2005-2014, she was the spiritual leader of Congregation Beth El in South Orange, New Jersey, and for six years prior to that was the solo rabbi of Congregation Beth Tikvah in New Milford, New Jersey. Her first rabbinic position was as an assistant rabbi at a large, suburban New Jersey congregation. Rabbi Roston’s position with Congregation Beth El made news around the world as she broke the “stained glass ceiling” when she became the first woman to lead a Conservative congregation larger than 500 members. During her tenure Rabbi Roston engaged the congregation in innovative learning programs, revitalization of Shabbat worship, building a communal Chevra Kadisha, and developing a welcoming, diverse congregation. She received ordination in 1998 from the Jewish Theological Seminary of America in New York and a BA in Near Eastern and Judaic Studies at Brandeis University. She is a Rabbis Without Borders fellow and teacher of the Community Resiliency Model® helping to create “trauma-informed” and “resiliency-focused” communities.
ULF JOHANSSON
Commissioner Stockholm Police
Ulf Johansson is the Chief Commissioner of Police in the Swedish capital of Stockholm. He has held several senior positions within the Swedish Police. Commissioner Johansson also holds a degree in law.

PAUL GOLDENBERG
Senior Fellow, Rutgers University’s Miller Center for Community Protection and Resilience
Paul Goldenberg has spent the last 25 years serving as an advisor to the highest levels of government in national security and the private sector and as an entrepreneur having helped start several companies. Mr. Goldenberg is currently President and CEO of Cardinal Point Strategies, a global affairs strategic consulting firm. He has managed high profile national security initiatives both within and outside of the government through his work as sworn member of the United States Department of Homeland Security Advisory Council (HSAC) and as the Head of the Office for Security and Cooperation in Europe’s (OSCE) transnational policing initiative. He has played a key role in setting domestic and international policy for the legislation and investigation of hate crimes and countering violent extremism and has been an international thought leader in information sharing, conflict resolution, public safety, cyber security policy, and creating and managing public-private partnerships among Federal, State and local governments. His most recent appointment comes at the directive of the U.S. Congress, which requested the Acting Secretary of Homeland Security to stand up a National Task Force to address targeted violence against American houses of worship and religious communities, of which Mr. Goldenberg was selected as co-Chair. In December 2014, the DHS Secretary appointed Mr. Goldenberg as co-Chair of the National DHS Foreign Fighter Task Force. He also served as Vice Chair of the US Department of Homeland Security’s Faith Based Council and as member of the Department’s Combating Violent Extremism (CVE) Working Group. His recent appointments include co-Chair of the DHS National Cyber Security Task Force and advisor to the United States Department of Homeland Security Foreign Influence Subcommittee. In 2015, Mr. Goldenberg was selected as Rutgers University Senior Fellow and advisor to the university’s Miller Center for Community Protection and Resilience program focusing on global community policing and transnational resiliency whose recommendations had been implemented in several European states. His public career includes more than two decades as a former senior member of the New Jersey State Attorney General's Office, Commissioner/Director of the nation's 6th largest county social service and juvenile justice system, and as a law enforcement official who headed investigation efforts for significant cases of domestic terrorism, political corruption, and organized crime. Following a series of highly publicized occurrences of domestic terrorism and hate crimes, the NJ State Attorney General appointed Mr. Goldenberg as the first state Chief of Office; for bias crimes, domestic terrorism and state community relations efforts. In 2004, Mr. Goldenberg spearheaded an international law enforcement mission for the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe.
(OSCE), the world's largest government security initiative, during which he worked in over eight European nations including Ukraine, Hungary, Kosovo and Croatia advising government and NGO groups on topics such as community conflict and the advent of transnational extremism. In his work domestically and internationally, Mr. Goldenberg commonly operated out of hostile surroundings and carried out highly sensitive works. Mr. Goldenberg has testified before the U.S. Congress, Presidential Commissions, the British Parliament's Foreign Affairs Committee, EU, Helsinki Commission, and appeared as an expert panelist and guest speaker at transnational security forums, both in the U.S. and abroad. He has been profiled, interviewed and has also contributed to leading television shows and publications worldwide, including Newsweek, The Washington Post, The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, Der Spiegel and, along with news programs and specials on the BBC, CNN, MSNBC, and Fox News. Mr. Goldenberg has received numerous tributes while working as a law enforcement officer in urban Essex County, New Jersey. He also served four years in as deep undercover agent for the South Florida Strike Force, and for his efforts he was recipient of Florida's most distinguished citation for valor: Officer of the Year. His on the ground works ultimately led to over 100 arrests. In 1986, Mr. Goldenberg returned to New Jersey as part of the Organized Crime and Narcotic Task Force where he headed a major investigation targeting members of one of New Jersey's most notorious crime families.

SAAD AMRANI
Chief Commissioner, Policy Advisor, Belgian Federal Police

Chief Saad Amrani started his career from 1998 to 2002 as deputy superintendent in charge of the implementation of community policing in daily processes in the north of Brussels, a difficult multicultural area that has produced many terrorist foreign fighters. He then led a judicial team in two different districts, before joining the General staff of the Brussels Chief of Police in 2006. For seven years, he was tasked with the coordination of public order issues, radicalization, and international relations. In 2011, he became a member of the National Task Force for the Syrian Fighters. He was also tasked by the European External Action Service as team leader in Myanmar, after communal clashes between Muslims and Buddhists, leading to a reform and training program of the police service. He was then appointed Deputy-Director of the Intervention Service and is a lecturer in European countries and the United-States. He also articulated an exchange program between the Moroccan anti-terrorist police and the Belgian police, in the context of the Syrian war. After his nomination as Chief-Commissioner, he was then appointed policy advisor of the Commissioner General of the Belgian Federal police, mainly in charge of operational matters, counter-terrorism and the follow-up of the Syrian fighters' returnees, a position he still holds. He is also attached as an expert in the Belgian government body, the Coordination Committee for Intelligence and Security that prepares the National Security Council. He speaks at many conferences in Europe, United States, Israel and Canada. He recently co-founded a think tank "Committee D," attached to the Home Affairs Ministry that promotes a new and “disruptive” approach to security issues.
AMIR ROSTAMI
Police Superintendent, Stockholm Police

PERRY MAYS
Chairman, Coalition for a Safe Community in Atlantic City

Perry Mays is a retiree from AtlantiCare Health System, where he worked for 32 years. Perry started his career in the Emergency Room and worked his way quickly up through the organization and held several key positions at AtlantiCare. Prior to his last position, he held a Total Quality Management Fellowship, in which Perry worked directly with the CEO of AtlantiCare. This Fellowship focused on "two" key issues: Why Youth Take Drugs and Why Youth Join Gangs. Soon thereafter Perry became the Coordinator of an initiative called "Healthy Cities", in which the focus changed to organizing communities to become more aware of their environment, both in clean air, preventative programs, and a sense of community. In 1997, Perry organized and trained individuals to take their communities back from "drug dealers" who had showed their disregard for positive life styles. Perry coordinated over 200 drug marches in Atlantic County. Through the success of the drug marches, four crack houses were closed, and people began to take back their communities in both Atlantic City and Pleasantville. Additionally, Pleasantville and Atlantic City were soon eligible for a Weed and Seed Grant. The concept of Weed and Seed was to "weed out the bad elements and "seed" with the good programs/resources. Over a span of five years both Atlantic City and Pleasantville received over $1 million in grant funding. Perry soon became the Director of Atlantic County Weed and Seed, and was very successful for the entire grant funding period. Other accomplishments were: Pennies for the Homeless, Young Ladies at Peace Program, Community Expos, five Gun Surrender Programs in which over 3,500 guns were retrieved off of the streets of Atlantic County, HIV/AIDS Seminars, and a Healthy Cities Basketball Team, where "x-gang members" were recruited to shoot hoops instead of each other.

TODD STETTNER

Former President & CEO, Jewish Federation of Greater Kansas City

In 2013, as President and CEO of the Jewish Federation of Greater Kansas City, Todd Stettner found himself in the lead role of building a security program for the Jewish community. On what should have been a quiet Sunday, a white supremacist attacked the Jewish Community Campus killing a grandfather and his grandson in the parking lot. This same gunman drove off and a few minutes later shot and killed a woman leaving the Jewish geriatric facility. Over the next two years, he lead the development of a security program using SCN, the Secure Community Network of the national Jewish community; and the regional Homeland Security professionals, to hire a security director and build a new program. He will share that experience, the required cultural shift and the other steps necessary to make the community a “harder target” in the future. Mr. Stettner has spent 44 years in social services with experience in fundraising, administration, and community development. Areas of expertise include fundraising, volunteer training event programming, strategic planning, non-profit governance, security planning and crisis management.

After almost 40 years in the Jewish Federation world, he retired and began life as a non-profit consultant. In the spring of 2017, he became interim director of the Medical Missions Foundation, an organization that provides surgical and other medical services to underserved countries around the world.

SEAN GRIFFIN
Former Deputy Head of Counter Terrorism, Europol

Sean Griffin is the former Deputy Head of the Europol counter terrorism unit, having worked for the organization between 2003 and 2014. He now works as an independent consultant, specializing in international law enforcement, counter terrorism and countering violent extremism. Upon leaving Europol, Mr. Griffin was selected for the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) expert’s roster as a subject matter expert concentrating on the Criminal Justice Response to Terrorism, contributing to capacity building workshops in Skopje, Sofia, Tashkent and Montenegro. More recently the United Nations office for Drugs and Crime (UN-ODC), Terrorism Prevention Branch, has engaged Mr. Griffin as a consultant for capacity building programs on Preventing and Countering Violent Extremism, with particular reference to returning foreign terrorist fighters. These programs were delivered in South and South-East Asia, the Western Balkans, and, currently, in Central Asian States. In 2015 he was engaged as a consultant to the Rutgers University Faith Based Community Security Program (now the Miller Centre for Community Protection and Resilience) with an emphasis on developing policy and programmatic guidance that local and national law enforcement authorities, faith- based organizations and the broader security community can use to partner more effectively in detecting and addressing threats to their communities; and working directly with communities and law enforcement agencies in the United States and Europe, in the implementation of best practices in this arena. During his time at Europol he was responsible for coordinating operational support to European Union Member States’ investigations into al-Qaeda inspired terrorist activity and was project manager for Europol activities relating to foreign terrorist fighters. He also represented Europol in the EU Commission CT working group and various international bodies, including the Global Counter Terrorism Forum (GCTF) and the United Nations Counter Terrorism Executive (UN-CTED). As a result of lessons learned in implementing the Europol Preparedness Program (following terrorist attacks in the EU in Madrid 2004 and in London 2005), he developed the concept of what is now known as the EU First Response Network (FRN), which effectively became the EU counter terrorism task force in waiting. The FRN was first activated in the wake of the Anders Breivik attacks in Oslo in July 2011. Mr. Griffin headed this first ever “First Response Team” charged with supporting the Norwegian authorities and with assessing the further response required at the EU level via a report to the EU Council of Justice and Home Affairs Ministers. Mr. Griffin joined the Police Service in 1978, moving into plain-clothes work as a Detective in 1983. After a period on the Major Crime Team he moved into covert operations in 1989 where he first became involved in the field of National Security.
